“Yakisugi” is the ancient Japanese art of treating the wood to preserve and embellish it. It is a natural process, which by a slight carbonization of the wood surface, becomes waterproof and more durable. Treated between 7 and 10 minutes, combustion is stopped with water when it has been carbonized in 3 or 4 mm thickness, then is brushed and protected with natural oils. Depending on the exposure to the flame and its subsequent brushing, it will result in a different finish and tone.

We present you “Yakedo” a light burnt and brushed Larch wood and “Tanka” a charred Accoya wood, in several colour versions.

“Yakisugi” es el antiguo arte Japonés de tratar la madera para su preservación y embellecimiento. Es un proceso natural , mediante una ligera carbonización de la superficie de la madera , que la hace impermeable y mas duradera. Se quema entre 7 y 10 minutos y se frena la combustión con agua cuando ha sido carbonizada en 3-4 mm de espesor, entonces se cepilla y se aplican aceites protectores naturales. Dependiendo del tiempo de exposición a la llama y su posterior cepillado, el aspecto final en cuanto a tono y acabado.

Os presentamos “Yakedo” madera de Alerce ligeramente quemada y cepillada y “Tanka” Accoya carbonizada, en varias versiones de color.
